Abstract

UAE Commercial Companies law 2 of 2015 introduced a new type of Companies “One Person Limited Liability Company” which is a type limited liability company, without setting up specific provisions to govern this type of company in terms of incorporation, capital and monitoring, creating a legislative gap. It was concluded through this thesis that the although the UAE legislator recognized One Person Company but still combines the idea of the com-pany from systematic and contractual side. This One Person Company is based on the idea of establishing a limited liability company by one person according to his own will , through deter-mining a certain amount from his personal financial capacity, by allocating it for a specific project which gains the legal identity , with limited liability as far as the amount of money allocated to that project, without extending to the rest of his financial capacity / assets and any other debt that might be implicated or arising from this company, and can be established directly or indirectly through the company's shares by meeting one's partner.
