Abstract

This study takes a modern concept relatively in terms of subject matter, which is the judicial control to works and procedures to conclude contracts by the administrative authorities. The study is limited by the role of the judiciary to control over prior administrative decisions to conclude the contract including the decisions that can be separated from the administrative contract.

The subject of the study is about the meaning of detachable decisions through finding a definition of it derived from applications of judiciary or law commentators and jurists by mentioning its elements. In order to reach how to distinguish these decisions from other decisions or actions that which will be carried out by administrative organization during the stages that preceding the conclusion of contracts.

The study also included emergence the thought of appealing these detachable decisions from administrative contracts from which we research the appealing conditions in front of judiciary of those decisions. In which we need to address them independent from the contract or the compound legal process in general. Also we highlight the importance of the effects on supervision of these actions. Especially, if the decision were canceled which were the reason for their existence. Where the rule states that once the decision is canceled the decision will not be reserved which it is necessary to restore the situation to what it was before it was issued. It also states what is built on illegitimacy is illegitimate which may be after the contractual relation.

Keywords: separable decisions, compound legal applications, Preliminary actions, conclusion of contract, formation of contracts, actions and procedures, administrative contracts, appeal cancellation
