

UAEU research reveals new information about memory processes in the human brain

Recent research at the United Arab Emirates University has examined different areas of the brain which perform different language and memory related functions. Some brain areas are involved in processing certain word types, while other areas of the brain are involved in keeping words in working memory.

Published on July 23
2019

